Important information regarding your investments

Based on what we know about your current holdings, you appear to be invested too <aggressively><conservatively> for your age.¹

When investing for the long-term, Fidelity believes that asset allocation (the percentage of stocks, bonds, and other investments) is the most important factor in balancing risk and reward. While your current investment mix may be designed to <minimize loss><maximize gains>, it's important to review your approach to make sure you're on target toward your goals.

To review your current asset allocation, access your plan's investment options. If you no longer want to monitor and adjust your investments yourself, there are two other strategies that may help you stay on the right track.

¹You may receive this message if your stock holdings are more than plus or minus 10% off from what the age-based stock holding would suggest. Your current age and stock holdings are compared with Fidelity's equity glide path (i.e., a range of age-based equity allocations that may be generally appropriate for many investors saving for retirement and planning to retire around ages 65 to 67). Fidelity's equity glide path is reflective of the equity glide path of a typical target date mutual fund, and is designed to become more conservative (or to decrease) as investors approach retirement and beyond. The glide path allocations, as of <Month Date Year>, begin with 90% stock holdings within a retirement portfolio at age 25, continuing down to 19% stock holdings 10–19 years after retirement. Stocks are defined as domestic equity, international equity, company stock, and the stock portion of blended investment options. In assessing your investment mix, this report considers only the percentage of stock holdings within the named workplace savings plan account and does not consider other investment types. The report does not take into consideration stock or other investments you may hold in other workplace savings plan accounts or in other accounts you may hold with Fidelity or elsewhere. It also does not consider other factors, such as risk tolerance, that may affect your retirement mix decision.

Diversification and asset allocation do not ensure a profit or guarantee against loss.

Target date funds are an asset mix of stocks, bonds, and other investments that automatically becomes more conservative as the fund approaches its target retirement date and beyond. Principal invested is not guaranteed.
