

Fidelity can help you review your choices about the retirement plan assets you received.

Deciding what to do with a loved one's assets, while dealing with their loss, can be an emotional and overwhelming experience. We want to help you move forward at a pace that makes you feel comfortable.

Depending on your situation and needs,¹ you may be able to do the following:

- Leave the money in its current plan.
- Roll over money into a new, existing, or inherited IRA.
- Cash out if you need immediate access.

Investing involves risk, including risk of loss.

¹Plan rules vary. You may be required to take action within a specified time period. Be sure that you understand the tax consequences of any withdrawal from the plan. The IRS generally requires you to take annual required minimum distributions (RMDs) beginning at age 73 from your tax-advantaged retirement accounts (excluding Roth IRAs).
